1st Annual
Symposium for Integrative Health
Tai Chi Retreat
September 8, 9, 10, 2017
Maris Stella Conference and Retreat Center
Welcome to the Symposium

Dear Participants, Sponsors, Presenters, Volunteers, Workshop Leaders;

It is our pleasure to welcome you to this most momentous and auspicious event; the inaugural Symposium for Integrative Health Tai Chi Retreat at Maris Stella Conference and Retreat Center between the beach and the bay, Long Beach Island, New Jersey.

What is rare about this event is the combination. We combine the ancient knowledge of integrative healthcare practices like tai chi, qigong, meditation, and massage with academic presentations and clinical research studies that provide scientific evidence for the benefits of these practices.

There have been four other events that provided a good foundation for this one. The International Taijiquan Form 2006 in ThunderBay, Canada was the first event that combined the academic with workshops, and the other one was the International Taijiquan Symposium at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, TN in 2009. The other two inspirational events for our Symposium were the Tai Chi Farm, hosted by Master Jou Tsung Hwa each June in Warwick, NY from 1984 to 2001, and A Taste of China, hosted each July by Pat Rice in Winchester, VA from 1983 to 2012.

This Symposium is many many years in coming. We were on the waiting list for an opening at the Maris Stella Conference & Retreat center for over two years. (As you can imagine, this beautiful center run by the Sisters of Charity that spans from the Beach to the Bay in some of the most highly valued real estate in New Jersey is a real jewel and in demand.) The Steering Committee has been meeting every two weeks via teleconference for over a year planning this event, and you'll read about all the people (yes, it does take a whole village) who worked together to bring this event to fruition.

One thing you will notice is that two of the programs under the auspices of HPL Institute are coming together to host this event. The academic research aspect of the event is hosted by Asklepios, while the workshops and retreat aspect of the event is hosted by Taijiquan Enthusiasts Organization.

This program guide contains a prodigious amount of information about our event; the workshops and their leaders, our sponsors, what is where at the retreat center, who to talk to, who are the volunteers, etc. Please review it so that you can gain some semblence of understanding. We hope that you might take the same kind of pleasure in partaking of this event as we experience in providing you with this event.

Additional Information

After the cleanup at Maris Stella, anyone who wishes to join us for the evening activities may do so. We plan to have an organizational meeting at the Gazebo in Bayview Park in Brant Beach at 4:30 pm (where the complete finances of the event will be presented), and then go to Zen Sushi Asian Cuisine for dinner at 5:30, returning to Bayview Park to do our final activity of the weekend, Sunset Qigong on the Bay.

If you have any interest in joining the organizational aspect of this event, and/or would like to volunteer for the following year, please join us. Each person will be responsible for chipping in to pay for their own meal (unless we have an unexpectedly large walk-in turnout, in which case, the Symposium Finances would be able to handle the costs for everyone).
Please Thank Our Sponsors and Friends!

The costs for this event, you may have noticed, are relatively low. That is because our sponsors help cover some of the costs of planning and putting on this event. Please show them your gratitude by patronizing their organizations, products, and services.

The first level of sponsorship is a Top Sponsor. Top sponsors get a full page advertisement in this program guide, an honored place on our sponsors page on our website, an introduction at the banquet as well as a ticket to the workshops.

The second level of sponsorship is Supporting Organization. Supporting Organizations are listed in this program guide as well, and some get the opportunity for one of the tables in our Silk Road Vendor Expo held in the conference center on Saturday and Sunday. They also get introduced at the Friday dinner.

The third level of sponsorship are those organizations, teachers, and healthcare practitioners who promote this event. There is a long list of them. They each have a promocode so that we can track how many people with whom they've shared the information about the event actually signed up. As an incentive, people who register with a promocode get a discount.

Thank the Friends of the Symposium

Friend of the Symposium do their best to promote the event and encourage people to register.

Patience Tai Chi, Laoshi William Phillips

Tai Chi for Health, Meditation, and Self-Defense

Would you like to learn Tai Chi, but don’t know where to start? Or perhaps you’re an experienced practitioner looking to enhance your skills. Maybe you’re just wondering, what is this Tai Chi stuff about, anyway?

Well, you’ve come to the right place!

Since 1970, the Patience Tai Chi Association (PTC) has taught Tai Chi and other Martial Arts to thousands of students. Today, we are dedicated to teaching Tai Chi exclusively in all of its aspects: as a moving meditation, for its health benefits, and of course, the sport of Push Hands, and as a high level Martial Art. We also invite practitioners of other Martial Arts to study with us to improve skills in their chosen Art.

At PTC, we teach Cheng Man-Ch’ing style Tai Chi, as it was taught to William C. Phillips by Professor Cheng in the 1970’s. However, we are committed to teaching solid Tai Chi principles that can be applied to any style.

So please, enjoy our site and discover why it has been said that whoever practices Tai Chi diligently, twice a day over a period of years, will attain the pliability of a child, the health of a lumberjack and the peace of mind of a sage.

We wouldn’t be anywhere without the three dozen people who volunteer their time and energy to make this Symposium happen. We know that most of these workshop leaders are esteemed, well known in their own Tai Chi, Qigong, Reiki, Massage, and many other Integrative Health Practices and Arts. We know that they could command top dollar to share their talents, skills, and expertise. But they come together at this event, caring only about the health and welfare of the people who come here. This is the kind of community that makes things happen, the kind that can support each participant on their own journey toward health, prosperity, and leadership. (Did you see how I worked in the motto of HPL Institute?).

Get a Massage During the Symposium

Polly Truex is a certified massage therapist for whom we can personally vouch as she has been Dr. Rhoads' primary massage therapist for the past 16 years. Call her at (610) 223-7196 to schedule your massage anytime during the Symposium. The full body massages are done in St. Anne's, in the Lao Tsu Room.
About the Academic Presentations

As noted, this Symposium is trying to do something rare; combine the elements of a fully-vetted, peer-reviewed juried academic conference with the hands-on practical elements of a health festival with workshops. This is not easy to do. So why are we doing it?

Integrative Health is a term that is relatively new. Practices such as Qigong, Tai Chi, Yoga, Massage, Pilates, Acupuncture, Nutrition, and Wellness Coaching were previously known as Alternative or Complimentary Medicine. This name was a reference to the idea that medical science was not involved in the therapies, and that they didn't have a preponderance of evidence for their use despite tons of anecdotal evidence.

Well, that is beginning to change. Although the typical primary care physician or surgeon may not yet subscribe to the scientific evidence of Integrative Health practices, the evidence is beginning to pile up and is becoming overwhelming. Not only do these therapies work, they work effectively and efficiently, sometimes at a fraction of the cost of drugs and surgery. Not everyone is happy with this news (most notably the pharmaceutical and medical device industries), so there is still quite a bit of resistance to the idea. Furthermore, Integrative Health practitioners have not (yet) banded together to form a cohesive industry that standardizes practices, methods, and referral processes. These things are yet to come.

But the fact that they are coming means that now is the time for the academic and evidentiary components of Integrative Health get together with those who actually teach and provide services for those practices that fall under the auspices of Integrative Health.

An academic presentation is not like a workshop. Generally, in order to be allowed to present at an academic conference, a university faculty member will propose writing a paper and submitting it to a committee of other faculty members (a group of peers), who review the paper and determine if it is acceptable to be presented at the conference. Once accepted, the presenter is assigned a room and a time with 3 or 4 other presenters, usually about an hour. During that hour, the presenters each present their paper (each taking 15 or 20 minutes). Sometimes all discussion and questions from the other presenters are held until the end, sometimes questions are taken after each presenter. Sometimes the only people in the room are the presenters, and other times people who might present at another time would join to hear the presentations. The presentations are expected to be high quality, well practiced, and targeted toward other university faculty members.

A workshop, on the other hand, usually provides much more time, anywhere from 50 minutes to 80 minutes. There is a leader who is expected to take the attendees through hands-on activities, perhaps learn a new form, technique, method, or approach. While there may be talking, it is not like a seminar (which would be a long talk-only kind of activity). Here at the Symposium we have not scheduled any seminars, only presentations and workshops.

(At an academic conference, there is also something called a Poster presentation which is when the faculty member creates a poster which is displayed throughout the conference. There is also usually an assigned time when the faculty member is expected to stand next to their poster to answer questions and/or discuss the scientific findings to anyone who comes to see it. This is known as a poster session.)

Unfortunately, since this is our first year attempting to do this combination, our academic presentation element is not quite what it should be. We did not get enough paper submissions in order to do a full peer review vetting. Rather than give up the attempt, we are taking baby steps. This inaugural Symposium has, as part of the presentations, both fully formed papers from fully vetted university professors, as well as abstracts only from students and good-idea presentations from practitioners. However, we will run it as an academic session with 3-4 people in a room presenting to each other (and anyone else who would like to join the academic session). While 15 minute slots have been assigned, the presenters may choose to rearrange the slots, adjust the times, and/or do anything else they may prefer to do regarding the presentations.

There are two academic sessions run concurrently on Friday morning from 9:30 to 11:30 am. The presenters are ChunLi Ni, Kevin Siddons, Ramsey Yunan, Richard Clear, Chet Zeiger, and Luc Bartimore.
About Virtual Presentations

There are several presenters who were not able to be physically present, but who wanted to present (and we wanted them to present) at the Symposium this year. In the past there would not have been a way for them to do so. But through the marvel of modern technology, we have made arrangements for them to present, also on Friday, at the same time as the other presentations. The virtual presenters are Michelle Greenwell, Jay Dunbar, Stephen Higgins, John Painter, and Marc Mathys.

Additionally we have two keynote speakers, Bill Douglas, the father of World Tai Chi & Qigong Day; and Dr. Roger Jahnke, famous researcher and founder of the Healer Within Foundation, the Institute for Integral Qigong and Tai Chi, as well as the developer of the widely-known health-based practice Tai Chi Easy. Both Bill and Roger will also be presenting.

We've been saying "via satellite" because people are familiar with that term from television, but the truth is we will be using the relatively new (but more reliable than Skype) Internet Application called Zoom. You will be able to see and hear the virtual presenters, and they will be able to hear and see you. All the virtual presenters will appear on the large screen in the conference center on Friday between 9:30 am and 2:00 pm.

While Zoom is relatively reliable, technology and the Internet aren't always so. This first year at the Symposium, the virtual presentations are experimental. We cannot guarantee that they will occur as planned, but we will do everything in our power to ensure that they do.

About Titles and Transliterations

One of the points of confusion is the fact that the Chinese language does not have letters, but has pictograms. In the sixties, the method of transliteration (converting pictograms to letters) was called Wade-Giles. In that method, the Chinese words are Tai Chi Ch'üan and Chi kung. In the eighties a different method of transliteration, Pinyin, was used. In that method, the Chinese words are Taichiuan and Qigong. All of this is very confusing of course. In order to make the whole thing easier for people to understand and the scientific community to obtain evidence, we use Tai Chi to mean both Taichiuan and Qigong. You will note many of the healthful practices called Tai Chi (such as Tai Chi Easy and Tai Chi Chih) are actually Qigong forms; not necessarily based on one of the five family's martial art.

Another point of confusion in this umbrella world of integrative health is what to call the teacher. There are many terms that could be used; Master, Teacher, Professor, Sifu, Sigue, Shifu, Guru, Dr., Coach, Leader, Lord, and more (okay, that last one didn't really belong. jk). In the world of Tai Chi and Martial Arts, Sifu is most often used, but that is a term often reserved for a student for his or her actual teacher.

Laoshi, on the other hand, is a term that simply means "honored teacher", so we use that term for those who are doing workshops (not just presentations).

About Tai Chi and Qigong and Benefits

While we are hoping, in future years, that this Symposium for Integrative Health will encompass more than just Tai Chi and Qigong, we can't help but recognize that the roots of the organizers of this event all have at least one of their feet planted firmly in that world. Many have more than 25 years of experience in this healthful martial art, and many practice the art for more than just healthful purposes. For those of you a bit new to the art, here is a bit more information to help you understand how these all fit together.
What is Tai Chi, Qigong, Push Hands, and More

It all started with an ancient martial art in China. While the long and esoteric path of the actual history is beyond the scope of this document, suffice to note that in the 60's and 70's several well-known practitioners of this art spread beyond the borders of China into other countries, including the United States. Today, there are five well-known "family styles" of Tai Chi; Chen, Yang, Sun, Wu, and Wu Hao. Each style has a formalized student-teacher structure, with a "lineage holder" who teaches the family "forms" (very specific movements designed on for self-defense and based on the principles). To those who have practiced Tai Chi for many years, the styles are recognizably different. Family forms may be open hand or weapon-based (fan, sword, staff, etc.)

However, there are also many hundreds of other styles, either deriving from one of the original five family styles, developed by a committee, or developed independently.

Also started in ancient China was Qigong; an "energy exercise", not necessarily based on a martial art. It combines deep breathing, focuses intention, and slow repetitive movements. To most, Tai Chi is a form of Qigong. (To a few, Qigong is a "warm up" for Tai Chi, and to others it is a healing practice not associated with the martial art. There is much controversy around this relationship, unfortunately.)

Tai Chi also encompasses the practice of Push Hands, also known as Sensing Hands. After students learn the Tai Chi Form, to "test" their ability to sense the center of their opponent, the students work together in drills, taking turns in applying the different techniques. Eventually, they can start competing with each other, trying to unbalance the other while remaining balanced themselves. There will be a Push Hands Meet (not a competition, though some players will compete with each other rather than stick to simple drills) on Friday evening in the Holy Family house. If you've never done Push Hands before, please find Laoshi Ramseyu Yunan who will explain the procedures and what to do. Always make sure that your partner knows your level of play so that more experience players can be gentle with less experienced players. Thoughtful experienced players will provide the same "attack" 4 or 5 times in a row for less experienced players (without saying a word) so that they can figure out a way to neutralize the attack on their own.

Please note; push hands meets are NOT workshops and except for Laoshi Yunan, no one should be providing any instructions for push hands. (This is especially true of mixed-couple partnerships. Female players are used to mansplaining, but that doesn't mean they think it is appropriate. Generally they are just too polite and mature to say so. Save yourself the embarrassment and avoid this faux pas by keeping your tips and techniques to yourself unless asked.)

Benefits of Tai Chi

Those of us who practice Tai Chi can't understand why everyone in the whole world doesn't do it every day. It's hard to know where to begin, because the benefits are so numerous. Of course, there are benefits such as "it looks cool", and "it's fun to do". It can be applied as a practical and effective system of self defense. And you can compete in national and international tournaments and competitions if you are so inclined. But the biggests benefits of practicing Tai Chi every day comes from the health-side effects of the practice. Basically, it can have a powerful impact on the body, and there are many documented cases of its ability to improve health.

Mayo Clinic recommends Tai Chi. They have produced many studies on the benefits, and have stated:

Preliminary evidence suggests that tai chi may offer numerous benefits beyond stress reduction, including:

- Reducing anxiety and depression
- Improving balance, flexibility and muscle strength
- Reducing falls in older adults
- Improving sleep quality
- Lowering blood pressure
- Improving cardiovascular fitness in older adult
- Relieving chronic pain
- Increasing energy, endurance and agility
- Improving overall feelings of well-being

Harvard Medical School recommends Tai Chi: "A growing body of carefully conducted research is building a compelling case for tai chi as an adjunct to standard medical treatment for the prevention and rehabilitation of many conditions commonly associated with age," says Peter M. Wayne, assistant professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School and director of the Tai Chi and Mind-Body Research Program at Harvard Medical School's Osher Research Center. An adjunct therapy is one that's used together with primary medical treatments, either to address a disease itself or its primary symptoms, or, more generally, to improve a patient's functioning and quality of life. According to the Harvard Medical Newsletter, Tai Chi can prevent or ease many ills of aging and could be the perfect activity for the rest of your life. Tai chi is often described as "meditation in motion," but they say it might well be called "medication in motion."

Proven benefits include:

- Improved strength, conditioning, coordination, and flexibility
- Reduced pain and stiffness
- Better balance and lower risk of falls
- Enhanced sleep
- Greater awareness, calmness, and overall sense of well being
- Prevention and easing of shingles pain
- Prevention and easing of fibromyalgia pain
- Greater stamina and vitality
- Reduced stress
- Enhanced immune system
- Improved cardiovascular, respiratory, circulatory, lymphatic, and digestive function
- Lower blood pressure
About Maris Stella

Maris Stella Mission Statement

Maris Stella, a ministry of the Sisters of Charity of Saint Elizabeth is a center that provides a ministry of hospitality, offering space and nourishment to individuals and groups seeking physical, psychological and spiritual enrichment. Located on the Atlantic Ocean and Barnegat Bay, it is a rich resource for study and reflection on the sacredness of creation.

Sister Mary Morley, Administrator – Cell: 973-975-3394
Sister Pat Dotzauer, Asst. Administrator – Cell: 973-919-2923

After two years on the waiting list, we were lucky enough to get a spot at Maris Stella Conference and Retreat Center. Now that we have it, as long as all goes well, we will keep our spot (the second weekend in September) year after year so that we can return annually to one of the most beautiful places on earth, Maris Stella in Harvey Cedars, Long Beach Island (LBI).

LBI is long, and narrow. In most places, LBI is only two blocks wide, with the Long Beach Boulevard running down the length of the island. Harvey Cedars is on the north end (so you turn left after getting on the Island from the Causeway, the only bridge on and off LBI. There is a joke; when you arrive on LBI, the havees turn right and the have mores turn left. Billy Joel used to have a house in Loveladies, the next beach up from Harvey Cedars.)

LBI has an immense number of attractions including the Barnegat Lighthouse, Fantasy Island Amusement Park, LBI Foundation for the Arts and Sciences, the Museum of Maritime History, and Viking Village. But the most popular attraction on LBI is, of course, swimming and surfing in the ocean, laying on the beach, or boating on the bay.

In the fifties, the Sisters of Charity purchased the estate of John Small, who owned all the land on both sides of the boulevard from beach to bay. Over the years they have built dormitories, houses, and conference centers and recently opened up the facilities to select outside groups.

* While it goes without saying, just to be sure, we will say it. This means BEHAVE! Treat this space as a reflection of the revered space that it is. Please follow the rules, don't make too much noise, pick up all trash, and show respect to all things, both living and non-living, while within its hallowed grounds and on neighboring properties. Please don't do anything that would cause the cancellation of our agreement in future years to share this wonderful and blessed space. While we all love fun and carousing, please take boisterous behavior to another location on the Island.
Onsite Housing

One of the houses that we have rented is called Holy Family. Sister Mary Morley, the administrator of the facilities, lives in half the house. We are renting the other half. The rooms don't have room numbers, so we've named them after Tai Chi styles: Chen, Sun, Wu, & Wu Hao. The Yang room is reserved for workshops, presentations, and the Push Hands Meet on Friday night.

The other house we are renting is called St. Anne. Again, the rooms don't have numbers, so we named them after figures in Tai Chi history: Lao Tsu, Zhang SanFeng, Yang LuChan, & Chen WangTing.

The rooms are dormitory style, with shared bathrooms. There are a limited number of beds, so in the future years, if you wish the onsite accommodations, you need to register very early.

Those who are in the onsite housing must clear out of their rooms by 11:00 on Sunday, September 10. There will be space in the conference center for baggage.

Workshop Areas

We expect that workshops will be conducted outside, so be sure to bring sunglasses and sunscreen and wear appropriate clothes and shoes for activities in the fields around the grounds or on the beach. Bayside Field 1 will be beside the Chapel, between the Conference Center and the Bay. Bayside Field 2 will be beside St. Anne, and Bayside Field 3 will be between Holy Family and the Conference Center.

If it rains, the activities of Bayside Field 1 will be held in the Conference Center. Bayside Field 2 will be held in St. Elizabeth, and Bayside Field 3 will be held in the Yang room of Holy Family.

Sunrise Qigong will be on the Beach (across the street and over the dunes, right in front of the walkway to the beach marked Maris Stella). Sunset Qigong will take place on the boardwalk around the Bay. This meditative activity is not a formal workshop with talking or explanation. Instead, it is a time for you to relax and get in touch with nature. Feel free to either follow the person leading a Qigong form, or do your own Qigong or Tai Chi form as you wish.

The Welcome Gathering and Closing, the Labyrinth Walk, the Virtual Presentations, the Silk Road, and all the meals will take place in the Conference Center. The Academic Presentations and the Push Hands Meet will take place in the Yang room of Holy Family. Massages will be held in the Lao Tsu room of St. Anne.
Laoshi Steven Arbitman

Steve Arbitman began his study of Tai Chi in 1968. Under Dr. Fred Wu, he learned a Yang style short form and began working on other elements of kung fu. For the last twenty years he has been a student at the Ba’z Tai Chi and Kung Fu studio in Philadelphia under Laoshi John Chen. In 2005 Laoshi John Chen awarded Mr. Arbitman permission to teach.

Steve has been presenting at our events for many years, and also has been instrumental in connecting the Tai chi demos for the Cultural Celebration for Chinese New Year at the University of Pennsylvania Museum with the Complete Mind Body Spirit & Taijiquan Enthusiasts Organization Chinese New Year Dinner.

By trade Steve is a technologist, and has often provided expertise and help to the organizers on their websites.

Silk Reeling: fundamental exercises

Chen Xiaowang compared the actual physical activity of the reeling technique to the action of a towel that is wrung to squeeze out water. Several "wringing out" exercises (different from the slow circular motions usually taught) will be presented in this workshop. Attendees will learn new standing meditation postures as well as chan si gong specific stretching exercises.
Lucy Bartimole
Lucy owns Shift, a mindful movement studio in Columbus, Ohio. She is the developer of Taiji For Balance: Levels 1-3™ and holds teacher trainings all over the country.

Taiji For Balance was designed for developing physical balance for those who are struggling with steadiness on their feet, but is currently being studied and taught to develop life balance in drug rehabilitation facilities, Support Groups for Cancer, Parkinson's, MS support groups, and Critical Care Nursing staffs.

Through The Ohio State University, she has been involved in several studies involving the benefits of mindful movement including Taiji for Fall Prevention; Taiji and Presenteeism and Critical Care Nursing; Stress Moderation Impacting Lupus with Exercise

Lucy has been practicing martial arts for 30 years and teaching tai chi for 18. She has a lifetime teaching certification from the Guang Ping Yang Tai Chi Association where she has served as Board President and board member for 14 years. She won the 2005 gold medal in the San Diego Grand National Championship for Guang Ping Yang Tai Chi. She is a registered yoga teacher (RYT-200) as awarded by Yoga Alliance and a personal trainer.

SMILE

Despite numerous studies indicating the positive effects of exercise and psychological stress reduction in autoimmune disease, these therapeutic modalities are currently underemphasized. To immunologically characterize disease pathology, the NZM2410 mouse model of lupus nephritis was either exercised daily at moderate intensity or exposed to psychosocial stress induction. Histopathological analysis demonstrated that stressors exacerbated and exercise significantly reduced lupus nephritis disease pathology, as measured by blood urea nitrogen levels, renal IgG and complement component 3 complex deposition, and pathological grading of H&E-stained kidney sections. Furthermore, stress induced levels of IL-6, TNF-α, and IL-1β, while exercise suppressed IL-6, TNF-α, IL-10, and CXCL1. To translate these results, a pilot cohort of active systemic lupus erythematosus (SLE) patients was enrolled into a daily Tai Chi program, which emphasized moderate exercise and meditative breathing. Questionnaires confirmed a significant reduction in perceived social stress and an increase in combined metabolic equivalent of task (MET) and overall physical activity. Furthermore, fitness activity tracker data showed a significant increase in steps, distance, and activity calories with no changes in body mass index or vigorous activity levels. Interestingly, this correlated with an increased time in bed each night on average for each SLE patient. Analysis of pro-inflammatory serum cytokine expression revealed suppression in the relative fold change of IL-6, IL-8, TNF-α, and IFN-γ with Tai Chi. Collectively, our data suggests that moderate exercise and stress management can have potent immunoregulatory effects on the chronic, systemic inflammation associated with SLE and establish Tai Chi as a viable adjunct therapeutic intervention.

Wellness Study

Title: Tai Chi for Workplace Wellness: Pilot Feasibility Study
Corresponding Author: Dr. Mary Fristad, Corresponding Author's Institution: First
Author: Mary Fristad Order of Authors: Mary Fristad; Beth Steinberg, MS, RN; Lucy Bartimole, BSC, CPT; Diane Habash, PhD, RD, LD
Abstract: Objectives: Determine the impact of Workplace Wellness training for nursing staff on high acuity inpatient care units. Design: Pilot randomized trial. Setting: Three high acuity inpatient units in an academic medical center. Interventions: An 8-week Tai Chi group class focused on mindfulness, alignment and posture offered at the work site. Main Outcome Measures: Nursing staff's wellness and their ability to provide compassionate patient care: 19 subscales from 5 measures were compared: Professional Quality of Life, Caring Assessment for Caregivers, PROMIS-29, Nurse Collaboration Inventory, PROMIS Global Health Scale. Results: Fifteen participants enrolled in the study; intervention attendance was low. Nevertheless, improvement was noted from pre- to post-intervention. More subscales changed in the desired direction than expected by chance (15 versus 4, two-tailed sign test, p=.0192) and 3 subscales showed significant improvement: The Caring Assessment for Caregivers Maintaining Beliefs subscale; fatigue; and sleep. Qualitative responses indicated participants feel considerable job stress; participation in the 8-session intervention was beneficial in stress reduction. Conclusions: A Workplace Wellness program designed to be easily accessible for nursing staff who work in a high-stress setting was underutilized; however, those who participated experienced significant benefit. Further exploration of how to increase uptake of available resources is warranted to improve worker health.

Falls in the Elderly

Falls in the elderly are common and a major, costly health problem. Taiji addresses many issues related to fall risk. Objectives: Determine whether intensive weekend training can sufficiently train persons who have baseline familiarity with Taiji to model and teach fundamentals of Taiji to the elderly. Prior to training, registrants received a manual, video and online links for review and practice. Assessments were completed pre/post training. Training occurred in four cities of one state. 34 adults completed training, two did not complete evaluations (n=12, 13, 4 and 5 at the four sites). Each training course consisted of two 9-hour days that educated prospective instructors on issues pertinent to the elderly, evaluation techniques, warm-up and cool-down movements and seated and standing Taiji postures. Assessments included pre-/post knowledge test, Timed Up and Go and Functional Reach Assessment. Nearly all (30/32, 94%) participants demonstrated adequate skills post-training. Knowledge of Taiji increased significantly from pre- to post-training (p<.01). Brief, intensive weekend training can increase the available workforce to train the elderly in fundamentals of Taiji for fall prevention.

Laoshi Jill L. Basso

Sifu Jill L. Basso, MA, LMT has been a Tai Chi Instructor since 1995. She has studied primarily in NY with Master William C. Phillips and Patience Tai Chi and is a senior student of Master Phillips. Jill L. Basso founded Hudson Valley Tai Chi in 1997 in upstate NY. She currently lives and teaches in Santa Fe, New Mexico. She is a 3-time gold medalist in push hands and the Yang Short Form. She has a love for teaching and blends her specialties as a Master Level Educator and Massage Therapist to her students. Jill teaches classes in Cheng Man Ching short form, push hands, sword form, leads local workshops, teaches children 5 and up and organizes the World Tai Chi Day events in Santa Fe.

Ta Lu

Ta Lu is the practice of the energies of split, elbow stroke, shoulder stroke and pull down, found in many postures in the Yang form. These 4 gates represent the four corners or directions and the root of the original 13 postures. In this workshop, participants will learn the energies and movements of these postures, relevant tai chi principles, as well as a two-person exercise to practice the application of these postures.

Sifu Chen is a Fourth Degree Black Belt of the Wu-Tang martial arts system originally founded in Taiwan. He is also a licensed acupuncturist, board certified by the NCCAOM, and a graduate of the Eastern School of Acupuncture and Traditional Medicine with training in TCM (Traditional Chinese Medicine) and acupuncture.

While studying in China, John participated in intensive, hands-on internships with the foremost Chinese physicians of the well respected Tianjin University Hospital. With his unique background of Tai Chi, Qi Gong, and other styles of Wu-Tang Kung Fu, Sifu Chen combines these modalities with his understanding of TCM in order to create a more personalized ‘body-mind-spirit’ approach for his students.

What Does TC have to do w/ Health & Self Defense

In this workshop, John Chen will go into detail on how and why performing a martial art like Tai Chi or an energy exercise like Qigong is a healthful activity as well as enabling self defense.

Sigung Richard Clear

Sigung (Master) Richard Clear is a 3rd generation lineage holder in Tai Chi from Lee Ying Arng who was a senior student under Yang Chen Fu. Tyrone Jackson – Dr. Fred Wu’s senior lineage disciple – was Sigung Clear’s first Tai Chi teacher. Master Clear studied directly with such famous masters as Ma Yeoh Liang, Wen Mei Yu, Dr. Fred Wu, Liu Ji Fa, Ju Bong Yi, Pei Xi Rong, Willem de Thouars and Don Ethan Miller among others. Master Clear began teaching Tai Chi in 1985 and has over 40 years of continuous study in Tai Chi, Martial Arts, and Chi Kung. He has a practical teaching method and knows both the healing and the martial side of Tai Chi and Chi Kung in depth.

Sigung (Master) Richard Clear has studied Tai Chi and Chi Kung in the U.S. and in China. Master Clear Began his study of Tai Chi at a very young age after he was diagnosed with degenerative arthritis. He experiences no pain from the arthritis and is more supple than the average person half his age.

Master Clear is a 3rd generation lineage holder in Tai Chi from Lee Ying Arng who was a senior student under Yang Chen Fu. Master Clear began teaching Tai Chi in 1985 and has over 40 years of continuous study in Tai Chi, Martial Arts, Psychology, Philosophy, Alternative Medicine and Physiology. Master Clear’s Tai Chi has been featured in national magazines and on television. He has a practical teaching method rooted in the basics and knows both the healing and the martial side of Tai Chi and Chi Kung in depth. He holds a Masters Level (Si Gung) in Internal Kung Fu and is a senior instructor in several martial arts. Master Clear is known for the quality of his instruction and the sincerity with which he teaches his programs, always taking the extra time to work with those in need, in a dedicated effort to pass on the many benefits and rewards he has received from his lifelong study in this field.

Study of Tai Chi Method

Tai Chi has proven to be beneficial for a variety of conditions, and studies indicate it is a generally more beneficial practice than other forms of exercise based therapy. Many of the health benefits specific to Tai Chi are strongly related to the normalization of blood pressure. Theorizing that the pain management benefits of Tai Chi may be related to blood pressure and blood-oxygen levels, and this study sought in part to find if such a correlation existed. A group of twelve (12) Cancer Patients volunteered to participate in the program and their blood and pain levels were monitored. Data was collected on all variables before and after sixty (60) minute Tai Chi sessions. The study was to be conducted over twelve (12) sessions during a six (6) week period. Although early results were very promising and short term benefits were noted in all subjects, the study was cut short and only four (4) sessions were recorded. The data collected makes a strong case for further study, though the limited number of sessions and small sample size were not enough to show any statistically significant results (P < .10).

Internal Push Hands for Internal Power

Sigung Clear will introduce “Internal Push Hands” to develop internal power & skill. When you practice Tai Chi internal energy methods correctly, the benefits are very profound.

This workshop will focus on how to train Tai Chi’s internal energy methods. Clear’s Internal Push HandsTM gives excellent feedback, and with the help of your internal push hands partner you will know if you are practicing correctly or what adjustments you need to make. Sifu Clear will teach how to do this step-by-step. This is not tournament push hands or “sumo” play!

The focus of this workshop is on internal energy development. Zhong Ding alignment for power, Sung, Peng, Ting and Rooting skill will be explained, and training methods for each will be taught. This will include how to train these skill sets when you practice your Tai Chi form. This workshop will also include how to use internal energy aspects to train the Tai Chi versions of Iron Palm, Iron Body and Dim Mak. This training is great for both health and self-defense.

Date and Time  Fri 2 - 3:20 PM
Track  Push Hands
Location: Bayside Field 3

The field effect of Tai Chi for Healing

The field effect generated by quality practice of Tai Chi has a healing effect on those close by and can be directed by a skilled practitioner.

In this presentation Sigung Clear will be demonstrating the field effect and explaining what is required to make it work.

In the practice of Tai Chi we first heal ourselves, then we make ourselves strong, then with proper practice we can heal others. The field effect generated by quality practice of Tai Chi has a healing effect on those close by and can be directed by a skilled practitioner.

In this presentation Sigung Clear will be demonstrating the field effect and explaining what is required to make it work including a question and answer session.

Date and Time  Sat 3:30 - 4:50 PM
Track  Meditative/Spiritual Development
Location: Bayside Field 2

Tai Chi Self Defense Techniques (made simple)

Tai Chi is a very effective self-defense method. In this workshop Sifu Clear will focus on Tai Chi eye strikes and groin hits. These moves will be trained safely and carefully in a professional environment with the health and safety of all workshop participants being the #1 priority.

Most of the eye and groin hit self-defense moves in Tai Chi are quite obvious and easy to do once they have been pointed out. These applications are for real street self-defense and are not appropriate for mma sporting events.

Most moves in the average Tai Chi form contain at least one or more eye and groin strikes. Many of the eye strikes and groin hitting applications in Tai Chi are hidden in plain sight. Once the practitioner has been exposed to these applications including how and why they work then they are easy to pick up in any other Tai Chi form and moves you might learn or work on in the future.

Date and Time  Sun 2 - 2:40 PM
Track  Taiji for Self Defense or Competition

Laoshi Bill Douglas

Bill Douglas was the 2009 Inductee to the World Internal Arts Hall of Fame in New York. Bill is the Founder of World Tai Chi & Qigong Day (WTCQD), held annually in 100s of cities in over 80 nations to educate the planet about the mounting medical research on Tai Chi and Qigong, and also to bring people together across racial, economic, ethnic, religious, and geo-political borders to provide an example to the world. The event's motto is "One World ... One Breath." WTCQD has been officially proclaimed by governors of 22 US states; by senates and legislatures, including the Senate of New York, California, and the National Congress of Brazil, and supported by embassies, consulates, and government agencies in many countries worldwide.

Bill is also the author of a best-selling Tai Chi book, published worldwide in several languages, "The Complete Idiot's Guide to Tai Chi & Qigong" (Penguin Books, 4th edition), and of "The Tao of Tai Chi: The Making of a New Science," which have been hailed by top Tai Chi masters and beginners alike. Bill is the Official Tai Chi Expert for renowned author/naturopath Dr. Andrew Weil's websites, and he has been a Tai Chi source for media worldwide, including: The New York Times; Wall Street Journal; Reader's Digest; BBC World Radio; The South China Morning Post; and China's Xinhua News Agency. Bill was commissioned by Prevention Magazine to create their Tai Chi tutorial for their issue on Tai Chi as a natural immunity boosting technique.

Bill was an early pioneer in getting Tai Chi and Qigong into modern healthcare, partnering with a major international pharmaceutical company to produce a DVD which was distributed by physicians all across the United States to their patients. Bill has presented to the American Heart Association, the National Parkinson's Foundation, ALS Association; Catholic Hospice Workers; National Catholic Youth Conference; and was a consultant for the National Council on Aging and the American national YMCA office to create a "Tai Chi Efficacy Guide" for aging professionals and institutions, a project create by Dr. Roger Jahnke.

Bill partnered with the University of Kansas Hospital and KU Medical Center to create Tai Chi Meditation programs for patients dealing with: Heart Disease; Hypertension; Type 2 Diabetes; Fibromyalgia and Chronic Pain/Spine Issues; etc.

He has presented for national government institutions, and for some of the world's largest corporations, and has shared free tips and how-to guides for nearly 20 years, to help Tai Chi and Qigong teachers worldwide to integrate their teaching into healthcare, corporate wellness, and society at all levels through his weekly free WorldTaiChiDay.org Ezine Newsletters, in a donated effort to improve world health and cut global health expenditures.

Laoshi Jay Dunbar

Dr. Jay Dunbar (Ph.D.) began Taijiquan studies in 1975 with Ruby Blaurock, a student of W.T.R. Chung, who was in turn a student of Kuo, Lien Ying, who brought the Guang Ping lineage to this country. In 1976 he traveled to San Francisco to study with Masters Chung and Kuo. In 1978 he began a discipleship with Jou, Tsung Hwa which was to span the next 20 years, until Master Jou’s tragic death in an automobile accident on August 3, 1998. Dr. Jay has learned from many teachers, including Zhu Tian Cai; Liang Shouyu; Yang Jwng Ming; Yang Zhenguo; Shi Zheng Zhong; Huang Chien-Liang; Henry Look, Dr. John Painter; Paul Gallagher; Lisa B. O’Shea, Susanna DeRosa; and Sam Masich. In 1982, with Almanzor Lamoureux, Pat Rice, Steve Rhodes, Cas Overton, Kim Ragland, and others he founded the Southeastern Taijiquan Society (later renamed The T’ai Chi Exchange) to promote sharing among players from all schools, and served as editor of its newsletter, “Changes,” for six years. In 1999, in memory of Master Jou, he created the 100-Day Program to help participants make personal progress by applying T’aiji principles in daily life, and in 2001 he established the Jou, Tsung Hwa Memorial Dantian Challenge and designed and produced the bronze medallions which are awarded to those who meet the challenge criteria. He has served as judge and referee in numerous tournaments including ATOC, USWKF, USCKF, and the Taiji Legacy since 1989, and has developed tournament rules for both form and push-hands competitions. He was technical editor of Tai Chi for Dummies (Hungry Minds, 2001), contributed the foreword to Exploring Tai Chi, by John Loupos (YMMA, 2003), and an article on Five Element Fajin to the Addendum of the newest edition of The Dao of Taijiquan: Way to Rejuvenation. He has produced and distributes a DVD on Shiba (18) Luohan Qigong, and created a sequence for Taiji Heavy Ball based on the traditional Chen family exercise. With his wife, Shifu Kathleen Cusick, he has team-taught over 65 intensives in ”san shou,” the traditional 88-movement two-person set. Dr. Jay is the founder and director of the Magic Tortoise Taijiquan School, based in Chapel Hill NC. His Ph.D. dissertation (Education, UNC-Chapel Hill, 1991), "Let A Hundred Flowers Bloom: A Profile of Taijiquan Instruction in America,” can be viewed online at www.magicturtle.com.

Healing the Knees

Sixty percent of Taijiquan teachers have reported knee injuries in themselves or their students as a result of practicing Taijiquan. The contemporary focus on safe knee dynamics began with an article in the August 1992 issue of T’ai Chi magazine, reprinted in T’ai Chi Press the next year. The article, “Research Shows Need for Training in Knee Safety,” was written by Jay Dunbar, who found in a survey of 216 Taijiquan teachers conducted for his dissertation that 60% of them reported knee injuries in themselves or their students as a result of practicing Taijiquan. The article concluded “If Taijiquan were viewed by more players as subject to guidelines for athletic activities rather than as somehow exempt from them, and if the requirements of strength, structure, and configuration are kept in mind, Taijiquan might be an ideal exercise for the knee.” Unfortunately, those who teach movements without understanding those guidelines pass their teacher’s bad habits as well as their own on to new generations of students with their own bad habits, many of whom take up the art hoping for healing. Taijiquan's measured pace, careful placement of the feet, and postural considerations should make it an ideal rehabilitative and preventive exercise for present or potential conditions of the knee. Yet Taijiquan places increased demand on the knees—depending on the height at which it is performed, width and length of stance, and duration of practice. Players without the proper awareness may seriously compromise their knee integrity. Considerations of dynamic limit, plane of support, hip mobility, knee stability, and awareness of functional relationships must inform any approach to knee safety. These are the subjects of this mini-workshop.

Michelle Greenwell

Michelle Greenwell lives and plays in Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, Canada. She has been a student of Tai Chi for over 20 years studying Moy Lin Shin’s yang style. With over a decade of experience as a Tai Chi instructor, she formed the Tai Chi Cape Breton Club in 2011 and gathers students from across the west side of the island in 4 different locations. She instructs in the 108 Moving Meditation, Sabre, and Loh Kup, as well as the seated version of all three. Her passion for movement crosses three decades of learning through Dance and Tai Chi. She specializes in full body movement and using movement to heal the body. With a Post-graduate Diploma in Complementary and Alternative Medicine for Energy Dynamics, Michelle is currently a student in the Master’s program at Akamai University. Studying Energy Kinesiology in the Complementary and Alternative Medicine program, Michelle is the creator of Qi YINtegration. Combining her knowledge of the 5 Element Theory from Chinese Medicine, the Energy Dynamics of movement from Manual Muscle Testing in Specialized Kinesiology, as well as her acute knowledge of movement through Tai Chi, she has created a simple and powerful introduction to movement re-patterning with a Tai Chi base. Providing simple postural and dynamic information to her students, Michelle has also created an introductory set called Tai Chi 7 to bring knowledge of movement and patterns back to her students for better health and vitality. Join Michelle’s journey with her website www.dancedebut.com; Facebook: Qi YINtegration, Feet First System, The K.E.Y. to Health with Energy Medicine; Youtube: Michelle Greenwell. Presentations, workshops and retreats have been a part of Michelle’s sharing across Canada, into the United States as well as Ireland, Scotland and Peru. Michelle B Waines Greenwell is a Master's student at Akamai University in Hilo, Hawaii. Her focus of study is on using movement to heal the body and she works with Energy Kinesiology tools to accomplish this task partnering with her passion for Tai Chi and the complete movement package that Tai Chi creates. With over 2 decades of education in Psychology, Dance, Tai Chi and Energy Medicine, Michelle brings a unique perspective to her presentations and programs.

Qi YINtegration

Understanding the value of muscle testing (or dowsing) to link up particular movement patterns from Tai Chi to eliminate health challenges. Movement patterns found in Tai Chi create a whole body movement approach that is superior for influencing the healing power of the body. Through the use of muscle testing, or dowsing, we are able to identify the movement patterns the body is looking for to balance energy flow and release stuck emotions within the tissue. Qi YINtegration is a specific program developed to work with the movement patterns of the 5 Elements and their corresponding muscles, as well as the use of frequency in sound and

Laoshi Stephen Higgins

Steve Higgins has been a student of the martial arts for over 30 years, and a student of Taiji and Qigong for since 1986. He is the Chief Instructor at Cold Mountain Internal Arts, Kitchener, Canada. He is one of the founding members of the Taijiquan Enthusiasts Organization. Cold Mountain Internal Arts was established in 1990 in Kitchener-Waterloo, Ontario. They offer daytime and evening classes in both Kitchener and Waterloo. Members include beginners and expert practitioners. Instructors encourage mixed group levels, not only with focused attention to those new to the arts, but also for those wishing to advance in their study and proficiency.

They practice different styles of Tai Chi and Qigong exercises. These are traditionally referred to as "internal arts" because they work with the deep structures of the body, and with its subtle energies. Postures and moves are practiced with a soft quality, slowly, and cultivating relaxation of muscles (as opposed to external martial arts that are fast and use external strikes, cultivating muscle power).

All internal arts share common principles of efficiency through relaxation, and particularity is in the diversity of styles we teach and practice. The teaching style combines theory and practice. All instruction is devoted to learning and practicing various Tai Chi and Qi Gong forms. Our club also has an academic component. Students are encouraged to read classic and modern references of internal arts and philosophies from Eastern as well as Western traditions. Groups gather regularly to study textbooks or articles and understand how to incorporate their teachings into one's own practice.

Old Yang as Tantra

Official policy in the People’s Republic of China holds that Tai Chi does not have a spiritual element but is concerned exclusively with health and (maybe) self defence. With regards to the Old Yang tradition, the Tian family in China, from whom our lineage derives, now denies any connection between their Tai Chi and spirituality. In part, this policy of the government is probably a response to the destabilizing effects of certain of the Chinese qigong-based ‘new religions’, such as Falun Da Fa. But it also falls in line with the Communist regime’s efforts to suppress religious and spiritual expression in China since the 1949 Revolution.

The 5 Elements – What’s your Style?

The 5 Elements or Rhythms is an ancient Chinese system used to explain and predict occurrences in nature, health, politics, and personality types. Its influence is evident in martial arts, philosophy, astrology, Feng Shui, medicine, and the arts in China. Knowing your primary Rhythm(s) will help your understanding of how you are perceived by others, your “lesson in life,” energetic imbalances you are prone to, and how to support your needs.

And, it will help you to focus on Qigong movements and Meridians that support your specific health care needs as well.

Laoshi Roger Jahnke

Dr. Roger Jahnke, O.M.D., has dedicated his professional life to sharing the powerful ancient healing traditions of China. He is the director and chief instructor of the Institute of Integral Qigong and Tai Chi, Santa Barbara, California; and a co-founder and recent chairperson of the board of the National Qigong Association.

With almost 30 years of clinical practice as a physician of acupuncture and Traditional Chinese Medicine and eight research tours to China, Dr. Jahnke has emerged as a key spokesperson for Tai Chi (Taiji) and Qigong (Chi Kung) and is a master teacher of these arts. He has studied hundreds of forms of Qigong with master teachers and visited numerous hospitals, institutes, training centers, temples, and sacred sites in China, focusing on the cultivation of Qi (Chi).

Dr. Jahnke has presented at major conferences on advances in Complementary and Alternative Medicine (CAM) throughout the United States. He has lectured on self-healing and emerging trends in health care and medicine to numerous hospital systems and health care associations, including the HealthCare Forum; the Catholic Health Association; the American Medical Association; the National Wellness Institute, Stevens Point, Wisconsin; and the American College of Healthcare Executives, Chicago, Illinois. He is a contributing author to numerous books on health promotion methodologies for both clinical providers and health care administrators.

The workshops and training sessions that Dr. Jahnke conducts at retreat centers such as Esalen Institute, Big Sur, California; the Omega Institute, Rhinebeck, New York; and Kripalu in Lenox, Massachusetts have inspired health care professionals and citizens throughout North America, South America, Europe, Australia, Canada, and Asia. In 2005, Dr. Jahnke was appointed to co-convene a National Expert Meeting on Qigong and Tai Chi in collaboration with the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and the National Blueprint for Active Aging.

Elixir of Longevity

The 'HeartMind' - In ancient Shamanic and Chinese medicine, the bridge between the 'Body' and the 'Spirit' - the 'HeartMind' - is one of the three 'Glorious Treasures' of the Golden Elixir. The ancients understood how to incorporate cultivation of the HeartMind - intellect, emotions - into their everyday lives. Discover how to cultivate the Golden Elixir of the HeartMind for yourself. Learn and practice how to accept that which cannot be changed, to forgive and trust the nature of the unfolding universe as it presents itself in our lives. Combining your increased understanding of traditional medicine and philosophy with new insights from contemporary science, empowers you and enables you to produce the Golden Elixir of Longevity and Immortality for the 'Mind' and 'Emotions'.

Taoist Body-Mind: 4 Tiers

Taoist practices are aimed to maximize the potentiality of human body-mind. Their cultivation of body-mind are divided into four consecutive stages: first, building up physical strength (ti-nen) through exercises and diet; second, transforming physical strength into “chi-nen” (bio-energy); third, elevating “chi-nen” (bio-energy) into the zhi-nen” (energy of intellect), and sheng-nen” (energy of spirituality), and then, the last stage, is to sublime zhi-nen & sheng-nen into the energy of “le-nen” (energy of creation). In this workshop, participants will learn physical exercises, meditative techniques and spiritual rituals which have been used by Taoist hermits to live out their highest potentiality as human beings.

Serving individuals with Cancer

Workshop participants will gain essential information for serving individuals with cancer. Cancer is pandemic. There are an estimated 15 million cancer survivors in the US, ten times that number world-wide. Globally, an estimated 15 million new cases are diagnosed each year. Qigong practice has recently been scientifically proven to preserve and even enhance cancer-related quality of life. As awareness of the potential benefits of Qigong practice in cancer care is raised, there will be a growing demand for programming and a work force need for competence qigong instructors. This interactive workshop presents up-to-date evidence base supporting qigong in complementary cancer care as well as information and insights gained from discussion and work product an international panel of experts convened (2017) to establish guidelines for structure and delivery of qigong in cancer care programming and to make recommendations about essential instructor knowledge, skills and attitudes. Participants have an opportunity to experience selected exercises, meditation, and self-massage appropriate for this population. Implications of this pioneer work are discussed with audience input. Participants will be provided with the International Expert Panel on Qigong in Cancer Care Working Paper and bibliographic reference of relevant research.

New Methods of Pain Relief

Marc Mathys runs the Organization for Pain Free Living. They are at the forefront of bringing a new treatment program to the U.S. called Systolic Engagement Training, or SET. It is not a pharmaceutical, but rather a novel approach designed to avoid the downsides of medication. Although invented at UNC, it is currently being tested with patients in Germany at the University of Marburg and other Universities. Early results are very promising and OPFL is working closely with the team to expand the therapy and trials into the United States. OPFL also provides courses, advice, equipment, videos, and other support to underserved populations such as senior citizens and people undergoing physical rehabilitation.

Entrepreneurship in China

Abstract: With the growing pace of globalization, as well as the result of the increase enrollment of college students and severe challenge of graduate placement in Chinese higher education, entrepreneurship education has become an essential field as one of the effective ways to solve the employment problems for graduates. Under the influence of worldwide entrepreneurship education tide, with the initiatives of building the Belt and Road unveiled by Chinese President Xi Jinping in 2013, how to effectively implement entrepreneurship education in the universities in China, especially how to orient a feasible entrepreneurship mode to Chinese local universities has become a crucial issue now. At present, entrepreneurship education in China is still in its initial stage. Thus, this research aims at first reviewing the backgrounds and four phases of entrepreneurship education in China with the relevant policy initiatives, then analyzing the achievement and challenges of the entrepreneurship education programs and activities, after that, from four perspectives making a theoretic investigation into the problems of entrepreneurship education, finally, providing a series of constructive suggestions for the sustainable development for the local universities in entrepreneurship education: government policy, financial and non-financial assistance from enterprises, reorientation of entrepreneurship education in universities and college students’ awareness.

Laoshi William Phillips

Sifu William C. Phillips has been practicing Tai Chi for over 40 years. His teachers include Professor Cheng Man-Ch'ing and Master Zhang Lu-Ping. Other Martial Arts experience: Nanadan, Shotokan Karate, Japan Shotokan Karate Association of North America, Godan, Ju-jitsu.

Sifu William C. (Bill) Phillips began his study of martial arts with Sifu Stanley Israel in 1965. He studied Karate, Ju-jitsu, and Judo with Sifu Israel, and in 1967 also began to study Tai Chi form with him. Sifu Israel was one of Professor Cheng Man-Ch'ing's six senior students in New York. After hearing about the Professor from Sifu Israel, Sifu Phillips sought out the Professor by knocking on Chinatown doors and began to study with him in early February of 1970. From Professor, Sifu Phillips refined his form, and also learned push hands and sword form. He became the most junior student to be given permission to take pictures and make audio and film recordings of the Professor, and was the most junior student to ever be given a beginner's form class to teach at Professor's school, the Shhr Jung.

After Professor Cheng's death in 1975, Sifu Phillips continued developing his form and push hands skills with another of of Professor's senior students, Mort Raphael, for a couple of years, but after that was largely on his own. In 1988, a friend brought Master Zhang Lu-Ping, on tour, to teach at Patience 'Tai Chi. Very impressed with his skill, Sifu Phillips asked Master Zhang if he would teach him, and Master Zhang agreed. For the next 10 years until Master Zhang's passing in 1998, Sifu Phillips learned Yang Long Form, and applications to push hands of Tai Chi form. He also greatly improved his push hands, rooting, and neutralization skills.

In 1970, Sifu Phillips founded the Patience 'Tai Chi Association, so named because of the quality he most wanted to be mindful of in his teaching and in his own studies. The Association has flourished over the years, and Sifu Phillips has taught hundreds of students Tai Chi, and until 1993, also Karate, and Ju-jitsu. Today, Sifu Phillips, who also holds the rank of Nanadan (7th degree black belt) in Shotokan Karate from the Japan Shotokan Karate Association of North America, and a Godan (5th degree black belt) in Ju-Jitsu from the American Ju-Jitsu Council, focuses mainly on teaching Tai Chi form and push hands. He has served as a judge at numerous tournaments, and has travelled the country teaching seminars, including at the Tai Chi Farm of Master Jou Tsung Hwa. He also ran a holistic health weekend at the Catskillview in the Catskill Mountains for 12 years, and held Cheng Man-Ch'ing Tai Chi Family gatherings for the 100th and 101th Anniversaries of Professor's birth. Sifu Phillips has made a number of television appearances on programs such as The O'Reilly Report on Fox Cable and Brent Garber's Health Update, and has been featured in many publications including USA Today, Inside Kung Fu and Men's Health.

Neutralization Exercises for Push Hands

In this workshop, we will work on the exercises that help a person to develop the underlying flexibilities and sensitivities for push hands. Also there are particular pathways of neutralizations which are very helpful to those neutralizations. We will do this through showing the flexibilities that are helpful in push hands and teach exercises developed to attain them. We will also teach exercises designed to enhance sensitivity, another important element of successful push hands. If time permits we will go on to the pathways of neutralizations. Specific pathways can make neutralizations smooth and virtually effortless. We will teach several of the common ones.

This is a hands on experiential workshop. Be prepared to learn and have a good time.

His preferred QiGong practice is 24 Posture Therapeutic QiGong developed by Grand Master Dr. Wang Zi Ping, Helen's Grandfather. He is an author, (Heal Yourself with QiGong), speaker and has produced a series of DVDs for home practice.

Sifu George Picard started his martial arts training in 1971. He has trained in several styles of Okinawan Karate and currently teaches Okinawan GoJu Karate Jutsu, Okinawan Kobudo and most major styles of QiGong. Tai Chi and Tai Chi Weapons at his home Dojo, Glenridge Martial Arts Academy and Wu Yi Jie He Academy in St. Catharines, Ontario, Canada.

Master Picard started teaching QiGong and Tai Chi in 1996 in Toronto, Ontario. Through serendipity and good fortune he met Master Helen Wu and Master Simon Hu. He continues to train weekly as a private student of both Masters. “One of my most memorable experiences was training with Grandmaster Wang Ju Rong in Houston Texas. Her grace, humility, knowledge and dedication I can only aspire to and would take another lifetime to attain.”

In 2005 Master Picard received his fourth generation certificate from Master Helen Wu. Master Picard’s focus is to help people heal their various conditions and attain higher levels of health and awareness, through QiGong / Tai Chi.

He has been teaching classes at Wellspring Niagara’s Cancer Support Center for eight years and currently teaches doctors, health care workers and private students throughout North America.

Master Picard also conducts seminars on healing through QiGong / Tai Chi and teaches others this healing system so more people can benefit physically, mentally, emotionally and spiritually.

24 Posture Qigong (origin: Wang Ziping)

The 24 Posture Qigong form, a modern derivative of ancient Qigong exercise, was developed by Masters Wang Ziping and Chende Wu in the mid 20th century. As rehabilitative exercise, it served as a precursor of modern physical therapy. It is practiced for healing, wellness, and longevity. The regimen includes gentle, slow, meditative exercise, sequenced to activate and restore body alignment and energy balance from head to toe. Self-massage and meditation are integrated into exercise patterns. This routine can serve as valuable addition to one’s Qigong repertoire. Come. Learn. Balance. Heal. Enjoy.

Wang Rengang is also the fifth generation successor of Hao Tai Chi Mei Hua Tonglong Quan (northern plum blossom praying mantis) under the famous Grandmaster Hao Weizhi.

Wang Rengang has won numerous gold medals in martial arts tournaments. He is also a certified Grade 1 Wushu judge both in the US and China and is invited to judge several tournaments each year. He immigrated to the US in 2000 and lives in Rego Park with his family. He teaches classes in Elmhurst and Flushing, and is available to travel for seminars.

Martial Roots of Tai Chi

Millions of people across the world practice their tai chi form unaware of the martial roots of the movements. This has earned tai chi the label of “a gentle Chinese exercise;” a name which does disservice to this once grand martial art. Locked inside every tai chi form are martial applications, designed to put the tai chi energies and principles into context. Without this knowledge, tai chi form is little more than an empty book filled with blank pages. With this knowledge, it is your key to unlocking the formidable power within. Join Sf. Wang while safely practicing with others to get the feel of how each application works, both as a stand-alone technique and as it applies to push hands — the precursor to actual tai chi sparring. Bring your questions and leave with the edge of new knowledge and techniques.

Laoshi CJ Rhoads

Dr. Christine Judith Rhoads (“CJ”) is one of those people who make you breathless just listening to her accomplishments. A sought after speaker, consultant, author, and expert in many different aspects of business, she has been recognized by her community with several awards and honors including the Athena Leadership award, one of Pennsylvania's Top Women in Business, Lehigh Valley's Most Influential Women, Kutztown University's College of Education Distinguished Alumni Award, and College of Business Top Researcher of the Year. Currently she is President and CEO for HPL Consortium, Inc., which develops technology tools to help people connect toward Health, Prosperity, and Leadership. She is also the managing director of HPL 501c3 Institute, which provides those tools to small groups and non-profits at a reduced fee so that they can help others achieve health, prosperity, and leadership as quickly and as efficiently as possible no matter how much (or little) technical expertise they hold. Rhoads is also a Professor in the College of Business at Kutztown University, where she teaches graduate and undergraduate courses in entrepreneurship, leadership, and information technology.

Her research in leadership and strategy is well-known for its practical usefulness, and her research in healthcare and the use of integrative health to lower costs and increase quality is being noticed by decision makers. In addition to her book, Telehealth in Rural Hospitals: Lessons Learned from Pennsylvania, she published a 400 page report on Telehealth for Pennsylvania Legislators. Her other most recent book is The Entrepreneur's Guide to Running a Business: Strategy and Leadership, which summarizes the lessons in all 12 books she edited for Praeger, a scholarly press. She publishes a monthly column in the Reading Eagle Business Weekly, and over 200 of her articles have been published in a variety of venues and languages. More than fifteen years ago, Rhoads was injured in a devastating car accident that left her with permanent memory problems from a mild traumatic brain injury and severe chronic back pain. Her recent business interests are focused on the areas that enabled her to not only recover from the financial hardships and physical disabilities as a result of the accident, but to surpass all expectations in terms of gaining health and prosperity. Her experiences led to the change in focus of her career as she is now dedicating her life to helping others achieve the same gains regardless of their circumstances.

Build a Rewarding IH Practice

Have you ever asked yourself these questions?...
- How do I expand my client/patient base? Where do I find new clients and patients?
- How can I keep my business financially rewarding enough to continue to help people?
- Why isn't my client base growing faster?
- How do I set up my office so that administration is easier?
- How do I convince people of the benefits of Integrative Health Practices?
- Why does insurance coverage seem to be the only reason people buy?
- Am I spending too much money and time on computers and social media? Am I not spending enough? How do I know?
- How do I ensure people trust my methods and my judgment?

Are you trying to develop or run an alternative healthcare business such as Naturopathy, Functional Medicine, Tai Chi, Qigong, Acupuncture, Yoga, Reiki, Massage Therapy, Pilates, Fitness Centers, Behavioral Therapy or any one of dozens of other alternative or integrative healthcare practices? This workshop is designed to introduce you to techniques that will optimize your practice.

Pain Freeing Qigong

Qigong, Tai chi, Yoga, Pilates, and many other mind-body practices decrease pain indirectly by interfering with the pain-feedback-loop that typically cranks up pain by escalating the body's typical response to the pain input. Dr. Rhoads has battled chronic pain for years due to injuries from a 2002 automobile accident. She has developed a mnemonic qigong that she performs daily that has helped her decrease her pain levels so that she can be a productive human being instead of disabled slug.

Dr. Kevin Siddons

Kevin Siddons, Ed.D. Dr. Siddons is a Qigong practitioner and teacher. He has a doctorate in Health Education from Temple University, and he teaches meditation, relaxation techniques, stress management, and pain management techniques. He has been training in Hun Yuan Qigong and Tai Chi. Recently he has been working with translators to bring Chinese Qigong texts to English audiences. He and his co-authors have been working to translate the historic text Xi Sui Jing (the Essence Cleansing Scripture), and The Five Animal Frolics of 3 Qigong Masters: Hu Yao Zhen, Jiao Guorui, and Dai Ye Tao.

Essence Cleansing

The Essence Cleansing Scripture (Xi Sui Jing) is the partner to the Muscle Changing Scripture (Yi Jin Jing).

While it seems to be a common document in China, it has not yet been translated into English. A translated version of this scripture will be presented and Tranquil Meditation techniques derived from the teachings will be taught.

Eight Pieces of Brocade Qigong

The Eight Pieces of Brocade is one of the most common forms of Chinese qigong used as exercise. The name of the form generally refers to how the eight individual movements of the form characterize and impart a silken quality (like that of a piece of brocade) to the body and its energy. The Eight Pieces of Brocade is primarily designated as a form of medical qigong, meant to improve health.

Laoshi Stephen Watson

Stephen Watson has immersed himself in Eastern philosophy for over 30 years. Taoism, the philosophical root of Taiji, is made clearer in a moment with Stephen than in poring over dozens of translations from the Classics. Stephen's martial training (the how) began in concert with his interest in philosophy (the why). His motto is: When you have enough Why's you have Wise. He specializes in transmitting a profound understanding of why. Ask a question and he will show you that you already know why. There are no hidden treasures only closed eyes. Stephen is has been featured in Inside Kung-Fu magazine and is known the world over for his engaging personality, kind-hearted approach to teaching and, of course, his world-class skill. Stephen travels the world offering workshops on various Chinese martial arts. Stephen Watson is the only person to compete in, referee at, and teach at martial arts tournaments for every umbrella organization at their national level. He is an International, 18-time US, and now World Champion in Taiji Push Hands. He operates a small martial arts school in Connecticut where he hosts masters from far and yon. His teachers include every person he has ever met. Come be his next teacher.

M, M, M, & MA

Awakening to the revelation that medicine, massage, movement, and martial arts are all the same affords us compassion for those employing other modalities as well as deep insight into our own practice, partner, and power. This workshop was originated for the creative artists, technicians, performers, & coaching staff of Ka, a show by Cirque du Soleil that has been performing daily at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas, Nevada since 2005. At Ka’s request, I developed a workshop designed to challenge, inspire, reveal, and connect these four interconnected worldviews by the single thread of imbalance. In this special hands on, hips in, eyes open, bodies groovin’ workshop Stephen Watson explores the oft-overlooked intersection of the Diagnostic, Therapeutic, Dance, and Self Defense modalities. Need we use an adjective every time we say ‘touch’? Whether you are a physical therapist, a granola Phish chick, the hardened aegis of your family, or a psychotherapist in the Jungian alterna-world we will transform you into the other three. Unfold you. The most fun you can have on two feet!

Ting Jin - Presence and Perception Power
How We Listen Becomes Who We Are. Listening Skills are the foundation of any Internal Artist, whether they be a Tai Chi player, a Ba Gua swirler, a visual artist, a graceful yogini, or a therapeutic touch professional - let's discover, access, explore, and challenge our Kung Fu of Listening.

'Hearing here' is the secret to being present. Being present, of course, is the secret to health, connection, and the continual development of a spirited spirit. To listen, to truly listen, is to devote one's energies to engagement with self, with other, and with the context of all of these connections. Engagement with what is, is the source of self cultivation at the headwaters of all of the internal Chinese martial arts. Ting Jin is presence and perception in as pure a version as one can easily ease into existence. It is the expression of developed energies by the internal artist who seeks not only to manifest power but to make that power resonate beyond the boundaries of the self.

To develop Ting Jin one needs to possess tools for returning to the here and now, staying in the here and now, and opening one's awareness beyond the here and now. Breathing, visualization, posture, and gesture all come into play in the internal artist's ceaseless practice of sourcing her self in the here and now. To remain in the here and now can easily turn oneself inward as in a meditative state of bliss shared by none beyond the practitioner. Ting Jin demands a presence in the here and now which, itself, reaches beyond to connect to others.

Using a variety of internal skills drawn from Taoist, Vedic, & Buddhist insights, attendees will play with energetic cultivation, transformation, and utilization. These energies will be considered for play within the body, within a partnered context (whether healing or competing), and within one's personal space. This workshop was custom developed to complement the studies of both the newcomer and veteran members of Push Hands.

Laoshi Ramsey Yunan

Sifu Ramsey Yunan has been training martial arts for over 40 years and teaching for the last 25. His styles include Yang Style Taijiquan, Baguazhang and Hsing-I Chuan as well as Kuntao, Silat, Cimande, Black Dragon, Mantis and Monkey Kung Fu. His teachers include Willem de Thouars, Don Ethan Miller, Bruce Walker, Wwaysun Liao, William C.C. Chen, Jou Tsung Hwa and Sydney Austin. He is a multi-time national push hands champion in several weight classes and now coaches for taiji competition. His current teaching focus is on Old-Hand Taiji and Kung Fu training methods.

Taijiquan Biomechanics

Balance and flow are two primary characteristics of the Chinese martial art, Tai Chi Chuan. However, flow can be interrupted and balance lost when a condition known as "The Double Weighing Error" occurs. Understanding this error and how to avoid it is critical to attaining advanced ability.

Passages about double weighting from the "Tai Chi Classics" tend to be rather cryptic. The terms used are subtle and abstract, and are easily misinterpreted and misunderstood, even before translation. Therefore, most people have difficulty in grasping the true nature of the concept and correctly implementing it into their practice.

This article will explore the principles underlying the double weighting error and relate the writings of the ancient Tai Chi Masters to modern scientific knowledge. By recognizing that the human body is a biomechanical system, engineering analysis methods can be applied to traditional Tai Chi Chuan practices to show how double weighting functions in the musculoskeletal system. Through this process, vague concepts such as “Central Equilibrium”, “Distinguishing Between Full and Empty”, and “Double Weighting” can be precisely defined and examined.

Hidden Treasures

Explore the internal martial arts roots of taiji and qigong. Discover the built-in martial training "secrets" and learn how they form the foundation for modern healing and fitness exercises.

Internal arts such as Taijiquan and qigong are well known for providing healthy, rejuvenating effects. Unfortunately, very few people appreciate the martial origins of these arts. Often, they misinterpret the self-defense aspects of the arts and overlook key features of the core exercises. As a result, they are only able to access a fraction of the potential benefits available from their practice.

By exploring the built-in martial arts elements of these internal traditions, we can understand how these exercises were originally designed to optimize people's long term physical and mental abilities so that they could remain healthy and be capable of defending themselves into old age. (Taijiquan was invented so that people could still fight when they were old, not because they were too old to fight.)

In the "Hidden Treasures" workshop, we examine common taiji and qigong exercises and identify the root elements. We then analyze basic standing and moving, anatomical structure and sensitivity feedback. Lastly, we will investigate experiencing martial energy and using it to enhance our daily practice.

Push Hands
Meet for friendly and fun push hands with fellow Tai Chi players. If you are new to push hands - come on in! Push hands activities can range from a gentle two-person sensing drill to a dynamic balancing competition. Let your partner know at what level you wish to play for a safe and convivial pursuit that many believe is the epitomy of enjoyable Tai Chi activities.

Fundamental Jing Training
On its most fundamental level, Taijiquan is founded on a set of distinct "body qualities" or "energy states", called "Jing". While many Jings have been described, there are four in particular that form the foundation of Taijiquan practice, Peng (Ward-Off), Liu (Roll Back), Ahn (Press), Ji (Squeeze). Every move in the Taijiquan form contains some aspect of these four, along with Song (Release), Zhong Ding (Equilibrium), and Ting (Listening). The fact that all these different qualities must be performed simultaneously makes it difficult to focus on any one individually during practice. Fortunately, there are a number of drills and exercises that allow dedicated study of Jings individually. Here we will examine some of the basic Jings and how to train each one. We will also discuss how to apply the principles involved to practicing other Jings and qualities.

Chet Zeiger

Chet Zeiger has spent two plus decades of intense study of qigong, baguazhang, xingyichuan, taijichuan, and other neijia arts. On Oct. 1, 2007, while Chet was serving as an interim President of a non-profit organization called Events of the Heart dedicated to women’s heart health awareness, he had the opportunity to meet Dr. Mehmet Oz at the organization’s first major all-star event. Dr. Oz was the keynote speaker. After a two minute demonstration of some basic qigong breathing to Dr. Oz, he was astounded and went on Oprah on Nov 1, 2007, one month later and stated that “If you want to be healthy and live to 100, do Chi Gung.”

In the Daoist arts, Chet counts Bruce Frantzis, Frank Allen, Roosevelt Gainey and too many trees to mention as great teachers and close friends over the years. He has also spent years in judo and jujutsu with Daryn and Dayn DeRose and a short but formative period with eventual Olympic Head Coach Yoshisada Yonezuka.

Chet studied Physics/Electrical Engineering and Mathematical Economics from Rutgers and Columbia Universities respectively. He has worked in international business for years both in the US and abroad, and has only been teaching informally as time would allow. He has used Daoist principles and fighting arts to survive and thrive in difficult situations, including war zones, board rooms, crisis management in business, health matters and peak performance endeavors. Chet is currently launching a company to bring his knowledge and experience to train people in the health care, business, education and law enforcement sectors.

Always Be Practicing

We practice, talk about and teach internal arts. What does that mean? Why haven’t more people heard of them? We have much more time than we think to practice what we preach, and to have cumulative positive results from that practice. Essentially, you can always be practicing one or several components. This furthers our own skills, improves our health/mindfulness/presence, and can potentially create efficiency and fun in any waking activity. By doing so, we will be an ongoing self-improving example of what we are teaching. This in turn will create more awareness for the value of internal arts. Why practice only during class?!
